ASSAULT CASE DEADLOCK LOOMS OVER EVIDENCE

NEW SCHOOL OPENING SET FOR JANUARY

"KIDNAP PLOT" CHARGE MADE, GIRL VANISHES

Girl Threatened, Bribe Offered, Alleged By Prosecution

MARTINEZ, Sept. 14.—Although the defense in the trial of Victor Loucheed, San Francisco engineer, facing a statutory charge preferred by Miss Esther Leighton, missing prosecutrix, offered no objection to presentation of preliminary testimony, the trial in the court of Superior Judge H. V. Alvarado, was marked by several clashes between prosecution and defense before the afternoon's session was continued.

Deputy District Attorney James F. Hoey and Deputy Sheriff J. W. Smiley presented affidavits stating that the missing witness could not be found and asked permission to present her testimony as given at the preliminary hearing. Attorney Cullinan, one of counsel for Loucheed, admitted due diligence in the search for Miss Leighton and said no objection would be interposed to the preliminary hearing statements of the girl.

Among the prosecuting witnesses, whom Deputy District Attorney James F. Hoey charged had been "kidnaped" trial of Victor Loucheed. (Continued on Page 8.)

Wild Birds Will Be Raised Here By Sportsmen

Members of the Richmond Sportsmen's club will undertake the raising of partridges and pheasants, according to plans announced last night. The birds will be released in and about Richmond.

The club will give a motion picture show giving scenes from the lives of wild animals in the near future. The public will be invited to see the show. Charles Mitchell, head of the entertainment committee, procured the films. Members of the club are planning to attend the sportsmen's show which is at the Oakland auditorium from September 17 to 24.

The bluejay committee reports that it bagged its quota of birds for last month. The birds are to be turned over to the government so that the contents of the stomachs may be analyzed. It will thus be determined whether the birds are destructive to wild life or not.

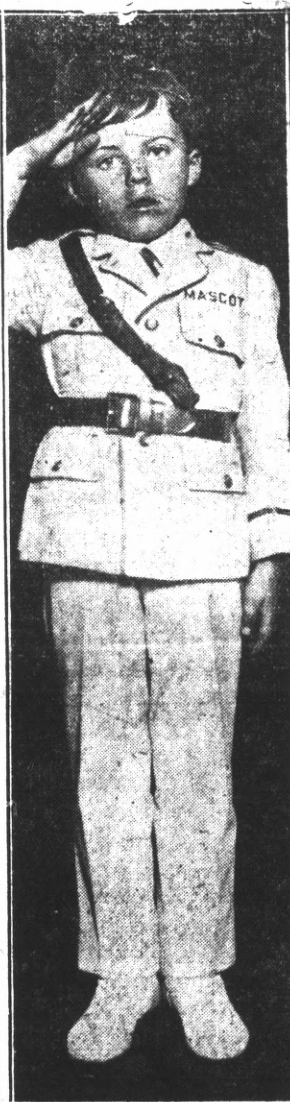

At the next meeting of the club, September 28 an entertainment and refreshments will be provided after the business meeting. One of the members will give a talk on seals and their habits.

Prize winners at the Richmond Whist club last night were Mrs. Ida Daley, L. Bowdick, Leslie Curley, Max Jedd, J. Riordan, O. Kufeld, L. Eggers, and H. Hartkopf.

TWELTH AND MACDONALD IS LOCATION SITE

Number Of Richmondites Rumored In Back Of New Institution

It was definitely learned yesterday that application for a new bank with a location on the 50 foot northeast corner of Macdonald avenue and Twelfth street had been filed by Deputy District Attorney James F. Hoey, of Martinez, last Tuesday with the State Banking commission in San Francisco.

The application with the banking commission was signed by Hoey and a number of Richmond people the names of whom could not be learned through the refusal of Hoey, the legal adviser of the interests in back of the new bank, to release any further information. Chief deputy Edward Holley of the banking commission represents the commission, but since he is ill at his home it has been impossible to secure any additional advice of the plans and details of the deal from this source.

Charles H. Hayden, of Martinez, has been handling the negotiations for the property, and Frank J. Gardner is said to represent the selling interests.

A two story frame building occupied by the De Luxe studio stands on the property at present which includes a vacant lot adjoining.

GLOBE FLYERS ABANDON HOP

TOKIO, Sept. 15.—The Globe circling flyers, Edward F. Schlee and Walter Brock, today called off their projected flight in the American monoplane Pride of Detroit, across the Pacific.

The scheduled flight was due to begin Friday from Kasumiga field near Tokio, but it was abandoned when it was found the 4500 foot runway did not allow enough clearance for the plane to take off when loaded. The continued bad weather had reduced the flying field to a dangerous puddle, it was said. Japanese aviation experts were unanimous in advising the flyers not to attempt the hop.

New Credit Plan Inaugurated By George Lohr

On October 1, Lohr's market will introduce to Richmond a unique credit-savings plan for its customers. According to George Lohr, the new plan does not involve any intricate system of high financing, but is a simple credit-savings account that has its workings in conjunction with the bank, the market and the customer. He declares that under the new system he will be able to meet all competitive prices at the same time allowing credit for service. The customer receives an amount from the market over a period of a few months, plus the interest that has accumulated in the joint account together with the saving in schedule of prices which the market will be able to allow them. Full particulars of the plans can be secured at the market.

The Richmond lodge of Knights Templars met last night in Masonic hall for a practice and a business meeting.

Kern Charges May Be Placed Against Major In Blast Net

Attorneys Fail To Show Surprise; Move Held "Harass Attempt"

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—Three felony charges in connection with the dynamiting of the Los Angeles aqueduct may be placed against Major C. Percy Watson of Inyo county and Alfred J. Betker, engineer, it was learned today.

Betker and Watson who have been bound over to the Alameda Superior Court on similar charges, will be prosecuted for illegal transportation, possession and storage of high explosives in Kern county, officers declared.

"I'm not surprised. Major Watson's counsel expected that steps would be taken in every county through which he transported the dynamite to have him arrested to have him," Attorney A. F. Bray, one of three local attorneys representing Watson declared yesterday when he was informed of statements of Kern county officials that charges against the ex-army officer would be filed there.

Watson is now facing trial in both Contra Costa and Alameda counties, complaints in both counties being predicated on virtually the same allegations.

Watson purchased dynamite at Contra Costa plants on May 11 and transported it to his Inyo county home for the purposes, he declares, of conducting experiments. Contra Costa and Los Angeles officials claim that a box of the dynamite purchased by Watson was found in a dynamited section of the Los Angeles aqueduct.

Sanford in behalf of George Fredenburg, chairman of the streets and highways committee of the Chamber of Commerce following a joint meeting of this committee and the streets committee of the City Council.

ISADORA DUNCAN KILLED BY AUTO

(By Universal Service)

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Isadora Duncan famous dancer was killed in a motor accident on the Promenade des Anglais at Nice at 10:45 o'clock tonight.

Driving with another woman, Isadora's Spanish shawl became entangled in the front wheels of her motor car and she was thrown from the machine.

The shawl wound about her throat and strangled her to death. She was dragged along the road for several yards before the motor was brought to a standstill.

Isadora was taken to the hospital Saint Roch at Nice, but she was dead when she arrived there.

Isadora Duncan, colorful exponent of the "free dance" was born in San Francisco about 17 years ago.

Before she was 20 she had gone to Europe, the idea of "free dance" being, by which the steps and postures interpreted both words and music. But this was not sensational. So she added to it what was then the shocking novelty of dancing with bare limbs.

But this pioneering was received with shrieks of protest. American respectability was outraged and would not have the "indecent exposure." Isadora went to England. There she made herself a reputation, specializing in "Greek dances." She returned to the United States, but her reputation failed to win for her a place on the American stage. Whereupon she established schools of "classic dancing" and daughters of rich loved like me. Men have threatened suicide; have taken poison over me. In Latin countries they have fought duels about me. They were men of all kinds—some of them now of world fame—geniuses, poets, musicians, artists, millionaires.

At one time Miss Duncan, finding herself without funds, her "million" having disappeared, planned to sell and publish the thousands of love letters received by her. As she put it:

"No woman in my time has loved like me. Men have threatened suicide; have taken poison over me. In Latin countries they have fought duels about me. They were men of all kinds—some of them now of world fame—geniuses, poets, musicians, artists, millionaires."

Americans flocked to her side. She made a fortune estimated at more than a million dollars.

Believing that she was being "persecuted," Miss Duncan joined the "Red" movement and went to Russia, where she was received as if she were royalty. Here in 1922, she married Sergei Essenin, "Red" poet, who later committed suicide.

Once in New York she was sued for $200,000 by Mrs. Clara S. Steichen for alienating the affections of Mrs. Steichen's husband, an artist.

Miss Duncan's two children were also killed in an automobile tragedy in France, and it was not until then that it was known that she had any children. The name of their father never was revealed.

Last Monday word came from France that the famous dancer, New York artist and grandson of John Jacob Astor. This story Miss Duncan denied.

CONSTRUCTION IS HELD AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Many New New Features Embodied In Woodrow Wilson Unit

With construction on the new Woodrow Wilson elementary school at Forty-second street and Roosevelt avenue ahead of schedule, the opening of the new addition to the Richmond schools is practically assured by January 1, in time for the new term.

The new school will be of brick veneer in the Tudor style of English architecture with mullioned windows and steep-tipped slate roofs. It will provide nine classrooms, a kindergarten and auditorium besides two playrooms in the basement.

A feature of the kindergarten will be the bay window opening on a play court where outdoor classes will be held in suitable weather. This is located on the first floor with four classrooms and rooms for the teachers and principal. The auditorium is located at the opposite end of the building and will be two stories in height.

The second floor will contain five classrooms, a special room and the balcony of the auditorium. There will be no stairways in the building. In their place, Architect James T. Nabbett has provided ramps with a slight incline. Besides saving the children's energy the ramps will give the acme of safety in case of fire or earthquakes.

J. H. Monk, who is also foreman of construction for the new Union high school building, is supervising the work at the Woodrow Wilson school. J. S. Hannah, the contractor, is also contractor of the new Pittsburg high school.

The trim of the windows and doors will be of terra cotta breaking the monotony of the brick and adding to the artistic aspect of the building. When completed, the new school will cost $125,000 exclusive of the site.

LAW AND THE AIR

The American Bar Association closed its convention with a demand for Congressional regulation of aviation.

Such regulation would be most unfortunate.

Congress has its long fingers into too much national pie already.

Its efforts do more to embarrass and hinder development than for the cause of progress.

There is too much government interference with too many things already.

Nobody should know that better than the lawyers.

It seems as though the sensible thing for the Bar Association to do would be a demand to repeal a few thousand of the useless statutes that already clutter up our legal procedure.

Aviation needs direction and not interference. Such flights as that inspired by a prize to reach tiny islands in the midst of a great ocean do the cause of flying more harm than good.

But if restrictive laws were to prevent feats except those that were 100 per cent safe, progress would stop. America would sink to the level of the Australian Bushmen, where inventions are looked upon as works of the devil and are never permitted to be put into use.

The Bar Association should have left flying to develop along its own lines—as it will anyway—and should rather have concerned itself with the terrible condition of laws and law enforcement in this country.

The comparatively few deaths in aviation are but a tiny fraction of deaths caused by the delays of our courts and the injustice to those who fall into the clutches of our judicial system.

Many people have a great deal more confidence in even the most rickety airplanes than they have in the true administration of justice.

Lawyers who have the good of their profession as well as the good of this nation at heart will buckle down to the big job of housecleaning their own profession.

Recent news-film pictures of Senator Borah indicate that if he has any presidential aspirations he isn't counting on the support of the barbers. His latest haircut must have been obtained in the Wilson administration.

A thing of beauty, if as dumb as an oyster, is not a joy forever.

How To Earn Money!

I am nervous and despondent, as I am in poor health. Recently I was in an accident and now I am a hopeless cripple. My husband and son were killed in the same accident. I would like to do something to bring my shattered nerves back. I have money and would like to open up a gift shop. I can paint a little and am handy with the needle.

NELLIE B. I know of many instances in which the simple forms of needlework were instrumental in bringing shattered nerves back to normal. I know one dear little woman, who had lost her hair, who actually knitted her way back to nerve-health. Day by day, little by little, the dropped stitches of little, the dropped stitches of little, were picked up and today she is a cheery, helpful woman doing everything in her power for all who need her help and encouragement and is proving a blessing to herself and others. By all means carry out your ideas regarding your gift shop. Do not invest a great deal of money. You might even conduct it in your own apartment. Many of the gifts you could make yourself, and you could sell for others on commission.

Through the woman's exchanges you might be able to obtain orders for hand-painted place cards, also for dainty hand-made articles. If you can afford it, however, a gift shop of your own will prove helpful in keeping you in touch with the outside world and in forming contacts.

I have originated a new bloomer pattern for little girls. It is decidedly unique, simple to follow, and a great improvement on the regulation bloomer pattern. How may I dispose of it? MRS. G. Unless you have facilities for placing it on the market yourself, and the money to back it, the only suggestion I can make is that you submit your ideas to a reliable magazine. Select a magazine featuring cutting patterns or one of the woman's magazines. If available, they will make you an offer on your pattern.

I have some beautiful samples of silk. Would you advise me to make those big French dolls I see displayed in the shops? They would have to sell at about $15 to $20 each in order for me to make anything on them. For they take a long time to make. Where could I sell such articles? I notice that they sell them from $25 up in the shops, and they are not as pretty as the ones I make. I am anxious to make some extra money to help my son finish his college course, and thought this would be a good way to do so.

MOTHER I would never advise you to waste your time on such expensive articles, as you will find that it is pretty hard to get such prices for ornaments nowadays, unless you have special orders for them. Yes, you see lots of expensive articles in the shops, but have you even seen crowds around the counters buying them? I would advise you to buy some small dolls with natural-looking baby faces and dress these. Children love such things, and you will be able to dispose of them much more quickly. Let your neighbors know about them. You might also try the Woman's Exchange or an ad in the paper.

Mrs. Sarah Spence will answer all questions on "How to Earn Money at Home." Address her care of this paper.

CONVENIENT LAPSE

Patient (nervously)—I think I'd better go home. I forgot something.

Dentist—Oh, Come, come. What did you forget?

Patient—I forgot to stay home when I was there.

What Your FACE TELLS

©c. 1927- by Betty Morrison PSYD.

THE DISSIPATED EYE WHICH TELLS A SAD TALE

What secrets the human eyes do give away. How much beauty, or sorrows may be in their depths. Through the years you may remember the affection, the warmth, the sympathy that lay silent in the expression of some one's eyes.

No part of our physical organism registers more quickly and more accurately the charm of health or the wasting and enervating power of disease. When the body glows with health, there is a sparkle in the eyes. When we are tired, the weariness of the eyes is more eloquent than words.

The eyes in this picture tell a sad story. They give to even the casual observer what the individual himself may believe he is concealing from the world. These are the eyes of the man who "reveals long into the night" in the words of Shakespeare. They tell of dissipation. All who disobey nature's laws pay a heavy penalty.

These eyes with the sagging and puffiness and the peculiar heavy body until he finds this unhappy condition showing in his eyes. For nature in rebellion records this on her chart.

When we realize how inevitable the marks of living and thinking are written where all the world can read, one feels the value of self control and the establishing of the finest habits of living.

If the young man and woman shaking cocktails or stuffing midnight lunches sees himself in this picture, will he not decide to stop and think it over? It will pay him.

YOUR MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

By Patricia Lee

The young husband who is searching frantically for some means of bringing about friendly relations between his family and his wife, and who gets no cooperation from either side has my sincere sympathy. This situation is by no means a common one, and presents a problem that often defies solution.

Says the MAN: I have been married just a little over a year and already my marriage is proving a sad disappointment. My wife does not get along with my mother and two sisters. I am the only son, and naturally they can't seem to get used to my being married. My wife resents everything they do and say. Now she has forbidden them to visit us. We have a new baby—a little son—and my mother has never even seen him. I cannot even call her up on the phone without starting a fight. On the other hand, I can't make mother realize that my wife leaves no time for me to visit her. I have a day-time job and a part-time job at night. But my mother thinks my wife keeps me away. It is all one horrible mess. Is there anything I can do to straighten things out? GILBERT

If I were you I would try taking sides with neither of them—for a while at least. If you allow yourself to be pulled first one way and then the other by their prejudices and petty jealousies you will accomplish nothing, but will only succeed in making yourself more unhappy than you are now. When grown-ups insist upon acting like children we can only treat them as such. If you want to see your mother, by all means go see her, but it would be unwise of you to bring her to your home just now—without your wife's approval. I believe, however, if you will use a little tact with constantly suggesting it to him?

There is only one cure for jealousy, and that is Common Sense. Cut out the hysterics; stop dramatizing the situation, and make up your mind once and for all that you are going to lick this little green-eyed monster to a fare-you-well. Go in to win—for so much is at stake. Have a heart-to-heart talk with yourself. Had your husband not preferred you to all others he would never have married you. Try to believe in him because if he is honest and sincere, he will justify your faith. Don't you know Bettina, that there is no surer way of driving a nut to philanthropy than by making it impossible for him?

There is only one cure for jealousy, and that is Common Sense. Cut out the hysterics; stop dramatizing the situation, and make up your mind once and for all that you are going to lick this little green-eyed monster to a fare-you-well. Go in to win—for so much is at stake. Have a heart-to-heart talk with yourself. Had your husband not preferred you to all others he would never have married you. Try to believe in him because if he is honest and sincere, he will justify your faith. Don't you know Bettina, that there is no surer way of driving a nut to philanthropy than by making it impossible for him?

People settled down in their seats once more to hear the conclusion of the lecture. Thus far most of them accepted Haynes' statements with a grain of salt. They were from Miss C. I, so to speak, and had to be shown.

Now on the screen appeared the latest model in touring cars. The buggy top was still retained, and the chassis stood high off the ground. Innumerable gear and brake rods were plainly visible underneath the body. A curved brass horn with a huge bulb was attached to the front door. The mudguards were divided into two sections—the front portion being utilized as a guard and a step, while the rear fender had no step, for the back seat of the car was entered from behind, a door opening in the center, while the seats curved slightly round. The steering rod was still the same.

By this time the crowd had become interested. The laughter died down. Here was something that looked real—something these people had never seen before.

"This shows the rapid progress we are making," Haynes was pointing to the new slide.

"What we have now come to call the 'automobile' will, in time, revolutionize transportation. Even now it is past the experimental stage and is practical for all purposes." He paused, looking at his audience. "But the purpose of my visits to the various towns in this state," he continued, "is not only to solicit orders for cars. I want to interest investors and secure money to further develop our plant. I shall be glad to meet anyone interested in the matter and give him any further information desired."

At a signal to Bob the lights were again turned on. Haynes stood in the doorway to shake hands with his listeners and to further the concern of questioners. Bob trailed the inventor, keeping close behind him. As the major part of the guests withdrew Stebbins accompanied the Mayor and the inventor into the parlor, while Hank, with his crew of followers remained in the dining room to laugh at the new contraption.

"I'll admit I'm sort of interested," began Stebbins as he seated himself with Haynes on the sofa. "But I don't quite understand what makes the thing go."

Haynes leaped into explanations, and Bob drew nearer, leaning against the organ listening. Into technicalities of cylinders and valves went Haynes. But Stebbins shook his head, bewildered. Haynes tried again. Once more Stebbins shook his head.

"But what makes it go?" he persisted.

Haynes was nonplussed. It was one thing to describe the workings of a combustion engine to an engineer or a mechanic, and quite another to explain them to a banker. But Bob was unable to hold back any longer.

"Why, it's the power of the explosions that makes it go, Mr. Stebbins," he interjected, eagerly.

"The power is transmitted to a shaft and back to the rear axle."

"Of course," assented Haynes.

Stebbins nodded, as though he had at least a glimmering of understanding. But Bob was full of his subject. He grabbed a vase and set it on the parlor table to represent a cylinder. He turned a long-stemmed rose up-side-down, to show how the valves worked. He transformed a lampshade into a gear. A few people now began to gather round. His father, standing in the dining room, was talking to those about him.

"And when he said that there wouldn't be any need for horses," Hank was repeating his now-famous joke. "I asked him if we could still keep dogs as pets." The crowd guffawed again and Hank continued his monologue.

He forgot Rose; he forgot Steve, although they, too, had joined the group and were watching the demonstration. He forgot his father and the words he had had that morning. Bob had by now transformed his automobile. The piano stool was a driving wheel; the poker a gear shaft. And Haynes was helping.

"Bob seems to know all about it," exclaimed Rose, proudly, ignoring Steve's disdainful smile.

"Well, there's lots more useful things to know about than automobiles," grinned Steve, pinching Rose's arm.

The girl drew away quickly, annoyed at the familiarity. Steve put his hands in his pockets and laughed.

Hank's audience was fast disappearing into the parlor as Bob continued his demonstration. But the older man went on, not noticing what was happening.

"And all I got to say is," he continued, "that anybody who believes what he said about those contraptions is a democrat." He turned toward his listeners, and, noting their society, looked to Dave Dobbs for information.

Dave pointed to the parlor, and Hank stopped to listen. He could hear Bob's voice running on and on. He walked to the archway that led from the dining room into the parlor and surveyed the scene. Stebbins was attending now with real interest, asking questions, and gathering information. The crowd was eagerly looking forward to hear. Suddenly, as it was borne in upon Hank that his son was talking his head off in favor of automobiles, he clenched his fists and shoved aside those gathered about the demonstrator. He drew up before his son and glared. Bob looked up with a smile on his face, but when he saw his father's stern expression the smile vanished. Stebbins and Haynes watched Hank inquiringly, but the Mayor squirmed uneasily.

"I don't thank you, Mr. Haynes, for making a fool of my boy," Hank exploded.

"What do you mean?" demanded the inventor.

Bob stepped to his father's side and laid a restraining hand on his arm, but the older man shook him off.

"You know as well as I do that horseless carriages will never be practical," boomed Hank. "And if you really intend selling stock in such things it's a downright swindle!"

Bob's head fell, and he dropped back, ashamed for his father. But Rose stepped quickly to the boy's side and surreptitiously slipped her hand into his.

"Never mind, Bob," she whispered. "It'll be all right." She had forgotten her anger of the early part of the evening. She only knew that Bob had been hurt, and her first thought was to comfort him. And she smiled reassuringly up into his face.

At Hank's remark Haynes flushed angrily and took a step forward. But he stopped suddenly, realizing that to carry the scene any further would simply injure his own cause.

"We all have our opinions, Mr. Armstrong," he said, gaining his self-control. "But time will prove that the day of the horse is drawing to a close."

Hank stared at the inventor as though he thought the man was mad. Then he laughed scornfully. "Come on, Bob," he called, and started for the hall. Bob, clutching Rose's hand, followed his father. Hank grabbed his hat from the hall rack and made for the door.

As the Mayor appeared and intercepted him Hank stuck out his hand to his friend. "I'm sorry about what happened, Jim," he said.

"But a little thing like that's not going to hurt our friendship. The fellow's crazy, that's all."

The Mayor clasped Hank's hand, but he neither replied nor agreed to the last statement.

"Good night, Rose," whispered Bob, "and thanks. You've been wonderful." Bob disappeared through the door in the wake of his father.

Rose turned and looked up at her father, questioning. Mayor Robbins shook his head.

"I'm afraid Hank's just a little narrow," he told Rose. "But he's a great fellow, in his own way."

And Rose smiled up at her father happily.

The Beavers' home is covered with mud. Just before winter sets in this mud freezes and becomes almost as hard as stone, covering the network of sticks making up the house.

Here's one that was not sufficiently covered with mud, and was broken into, thus making it possible for us to see the two holes leading from the water below to their living quarters above the ice.

THE FIRST AUTO

© BY ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927 Warner Bros. Pictures Inc. THE FIRST AUTO with Barney Oldfield and Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

It is the year 1896; Bob, son of Hank Armstrong, a horse fancier, is secretly inventing automobile engines and openly courting Rose Robbins. Steve Bentley makes overtures to the girl and Bob quarrels with him. Steve Eyes, Hank's favorite mare, dies, and Hank, looking for horse medicine, discovers Bob's mechanical drawings, and in his hatred of the new invention turns on his son. At the Mayor's reception that night, where Haynes, inventor of a horseless carriage, is lecturing, Rose confines her attentions to Steve in order to rouse Bob's jealousy. Bob angers his father by upholding Haynes' cause and Hank quarrels with the inventor.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but which is an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overweightness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat.

If you are overweight do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

Six Years Of Civilization Sends Girl Back To Jungle

By VINA LINDSAY
Universal Service Staff
Correspondent

TOPEKA, Kas., Sept. 14.—A six-year-old girl from the wilds of the jungle, who has been in the hands of civilization for six years, is being sent back to her father in his island cave.

Florence has discarded her shagreened dresses, silk stockings, and a d. powder, donned hickory bark and generally returned to the Robinson Crusoe existence on the lonely island in the Kaw river from which she was taken by probation officers in 1921. Her return was made partly for the sake of her two small sons whom she desires shall have the same primitive start in life as herself. She has separated from the boys' father, John Lane, a Topeka youth, whom she married shortly after she made her debut into civilization.

With her father, Andy Adams, a hermit, Florence and her children will live in an underground cave. The cave is the one in which Florence was born twenty-one years ago. Adams formerly was a prosperous business man in Western Kansas.

MAT AT HUMANITY

Following financial reverses thirty-one years ago, he became embittered at humanity. In order to get as far away from civilization as possible, he took his family to a lonely island in the Kaw river, about thirty miles west of here. One by one, the members of Adams' family tired of the primeval existence and left the island. Only Florence and a younger brother were living with the father in the cave when probation officers took the girl in custody.

When Florence was brought into Topeka she was as ignorant of civilization as a savage. Given a dress, she did not know how to put it on. She also saw her first shoes and stockings. But after awhile, bright lights began to lure her. She went to movies and dances, she bobbed her hair, and became addicted to flapper clothes.

BARRYMORE IS GAY LOTHARIO AT CALIFORNIA

"Don Juan" has become known as the lovers' picture, as it is fitting for the story of the greatest lover of all ages. But it is also an artist's picture, and the background against which John Barrymore moves in a network of enormous scenic art in themselves excellent excuses for seeing this great Warner Brothers production, now on view at the California Theatre.

The backgrounds, representing the splendor of Rome in the days of the Borgias, and a Spanish-Moorish castle near Seville, were constructed under the supervision of Ben Carré, the European painter. In all of the important sets exact reproductions were made of the historical originals. These include the Borgia palace and its approach and courtyard, the Castle of St. Angelo, the luxurious villa of a Roman gentleman, and the Spanish castle.

"Our effort was to recreate not only the form but the spirit of the Renaissance," said Mr. Carré. "Life and its fittings were never more colorful nor dramatic. It was the period of art's most eloquent expression. In the lighting and grouping of the huge throngs who move through the picture, we think we have caught something that fills the period, and that has been so splendidly caught in the intensity of the screen story."

Other features include a Felix the Cat cartoon comedy; International News; and Larry Canele at the organ.

Clothing Center For Men Planned

(By Universal Service)
NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—One of the daring real estate operators with several Broadway skyscrapers to his credit is endeavoring to establish a men's clothing center on Seventh Avenue. If successful in his aims the new settlement will correspond with the women's wear center, now also located on Seventh Avenue and apparently in a thriving condition. A number of tenants have already been secured for the new apparel fortress. Men's clothing interests are widely scattered in New York at the present time. Many of the most influential houses are located below Union Square which is considered "way down town" as such matters are today reckoned. Others have plants in the cross-town Twenties, in or near Madison Square. Tenants for the proposed center will be drafted from many quarters. Business men from other cities to come to town on buying expeditions vigorously approve of the business center idea. They claim they can complete their buying in quick order when all the firms they wish to consult are located in one building. The retailers also contend that they can come to market more often if they can accomplish their missions without waste of time. The wholesalers are inclined to support business centers and instead of fearing competition, it is asserted that rival firms get better results when a district or neighborhood is known to house the greatest number of men in any specified line of production. Buyers rotate to the point where they can inspect the greatest number of lines without wasting time on taxis or subway travel. While the success of the proposed clothing center still remains more or less of a problem the venture is receiving support from influential quarters.

RICHMOND HAS PHOTOPLAY OF DANCE THRILLS

"Matinee Ladies," a Warner production, with lovely May McAvoy as the star is the attraction at the Richmond Theatre. And it is an attraction! In support of Miss McAvoy is the popular Malcolm McGregor, who is cast as a young law student who turns dancing man to raise funds to pay his way through college. At the roadhouse he meets Sallie, the cigarette girl, and the two manage to steer clear of entanglements, overtly serious with the matinee ladies who would "spare the youth, and not belied rounders who would have Sallie from the straight and narrow path. A story of force, beauty and humanity and at the same time of the utmost modernity is the result of Graham Baker's adaptation of the work of Albert S. Howson and Sidney R. Hochman. Others in the cast are Hella Hopper, Margaret Seddon, Richard Tucker, John Lefteroy, Clay Fitzgerald and William Demarest. It was directed by Byron Haskins. No one should miss the pleasure of seeing this picture. Other film features on the same program include "Jane's Troubles," a roaring comedy; and the latest Fox News.

A blue gas flame keeps your cooking utensils clean

A perfectly working Gas Range is a delight to use.

But at times, food boiling over or dust drawn in through the air mixers will carbonize and unless the burners are cleaned these particles will close the holes or ports of the burners. The result is a yellow flame or a "popping" noise when you turn off the gas. This is improper combustion.

The burners of your Gas Range are easily removed and should be cleaned each month to insure perfect combustion and cleanliness. Merely boil the burners in a solution of lye water or caustic soda until they are thoroughly clean.

You'll find it easy to keep your Gas Range as clean as any other piece of furniture in the house. The range will operate perfectly. It will last longer. You'll enjoy its speed, cleanliness and the ease of cooking with Gas—just as thousands of other women are doing today.

Remodel Concessions Plan In Soviet Russia To Save Companies From Bankruptcy

MOSCOW, Sept. 12.—Simplification of the whole concessions policy of the Soviet government to facilitate and systematize transactions which heretofore have dragged along for as much as five and six months is announced by the Main Concessions committee of which Leon Trotsky is at least the nominal chief, and Adolph Joffe, acting director.

SEE NEW ERA

The British diplomatic and trade break with the Soviets marks the beginning of what promises to be a new era.

For the first time since the organization of the Concessions committee six years ago it will cooperate with the Industrial Planning Commission which is entrusted with the building up of Soviet industries. The lack of co-ordination between these two important bodies has wasted millions of the workers' and peasants' hard earned rubles.

U. S. May Adopt Diploma Plan

(By Universal Service)
LOS ANGELES, Sept. 14.—Washington is manifesting interest in the Los Angeles "diploma plan" of educating aliens for citizenship.

On a recent visit here, Assistant Secretary of Labor White conferred with Federal Judge Edward J. Hastings and Charles C. Kelso, director of the citizenship department of the local public schools, on the plan of awarding citizenship diplomas to aliens who have qualified by school study.

Another conference is to be held at Washington to be arranged looking to the possibility of its becoming a national "diploma plan" movement.

The three judges of the Federal courts of Southern California before whom applicants for naturalization appear have issued a memorandum on the plan. This says in part:

"A department of citizenship has been formed in the public schools of Los Angeles. This department is operated so as to meet the demands of all petitioners for naturalization who are referred to this service by the Bureau of Naturalization.

"An outline of the course indicates that work is thorough, comprehensive and practical.

"The service rendered by the department of citizenship has been of high character and very satisfactory to the courts in their work as naturalization judges.

"Undoubtedly the plan here operated contains the germ of a big idea and should be encouraged in every way."

The Los Angeles plan has been a marked success, and is suitable for national application. In the opinion of Frederick Jones, district director of naturalization.

CONTINUE HUNT FOR OLD GLORY CREW OF THREE

By DOUGLAS MUIR
Special correspondent Universal Service and the N. Y. Daily Mirror.

ABOARD THE S. S. KYLE, S. S. Kyle, via Lonsberg, N. S. Sept. 14. Searching in all directions from position wreckage was located. Weather clearing. Wind northwest. Nothing sighted.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Two to whom Trans-Atlantic air achievement was all science and achievement, today maintained hope for survival of Lloyd W. Bertand, J. D. Hill and Philip Payne. A hope founded on their expert knowledge of the pilots and the equipment of the Old Glory.

Anthony Pokker, designer and builder of the Monoplane, and E. W. DeSham, representative and expert of the Bristol Airplane Co. which supplied the Bristol Jupiter motor for the plane, expressed virtually the same hopeful thoughts.

"Neither pilot nor the plane were responsible for the forced landing, in my opinion," said Pokker. "Reports indicate that the Old Glory had to make a forced landing in the dark in a rough sea. Knowing Hill and Bertand as I do, and their ability as pilots, I feel sure that when they realized they had to make such a forced landing they did so with their usual good judgment and probably came down in what on land would have been a perfect landing.

"We all know that no matter how perfect the landing made even in daylight on the water, it is liable to be disastrous to a land plane, add darkness and a rough sea to the situation and it becomes worse.

"Undoubtedly the pilots did all they could to right up to the last minute, and the circumstances were so bad, with the darkness and rough sea against them, they did not have much chance. The possibility that they may still be afloat in the rubber boat is a hopeful one and I trust it may be true."

"Snake Hips" Late Fad For The Male

By EDWARD M. RUTTENER

Universal Service Fashion Expert
NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Fashion decrees the hipless man—presumably to harmonize with the hipless women who seem to have claimed the world for their very own. In many of the garments designed for fall and now being delivered to retail merchants there is a marked tendency to make masculine hips invisible. This is accomplished by means of a jacket that sets over the hips in such a manner as to eliminate all suggestion that such parts of the anatomy exist.

The younger women today diet off all unnecessary flesh and as a result give a suggestion of being tall and very slim. The "boyish form" is the approved type among the younger girls and the flapper who is truly fashionable has no more suggestion of hips than a slim man.

Designers who are advocating "snake hips" for men have accentuated the effect by making the shoulders of their jackets extremely broad and featuring a peaked lapel to stress the contour. The jacket then tapers down gradually and is extremely short.

CARDINALS TO BEGIN PRACTICE NEXT THURSDAY

By DON EYVENHOFER
STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 14.—Nearly 200 men are expected to climb into football uniforms here next Thursday when fall practice officially opens.
"Pop" Warner's varsity squad is expected to include at least seventy-five and "Husky" Hunt will probably have more than one hundred freshman aspirants. The Cardinal coaching staff will have but eight days in which to prepare for the season opening.
Saturday, September 24, the Stanford varsity meets the Olympic Club of San Francisco and Fresno State Teachers' College in a double header and the Freshmen tackle the 250th Coast Artillery, California National Guard.
Graduate Manager Alfred R. Masters looks for greater public interest in football this year than ever before. Masters loses his opinion on the progress of ticket sales to date.

J. C. Irwin, head of the Ticket Department, reports that Stanford's allotment of duets for the Big Game is virtually exhausted. Applications for the U. S. C. game have far exceeded expectations. The advance sale for the U. S. C. game has been heavier than for any grid contest ever played here, other than the Big Game.

Season ticket books which have been on sale for a little more than a week, have been going fast. This book, carrying a value of ten dollars, sells for five and guarantees the holder a seat near the 50 yard line for the Stanford—U. S. C. game. The books may be purchased at the following places: San Francisco: Ellery Arms, Hastings, Roos Brothers, Spauldings, and United Bank and Trust (all branches); San Jose—Springs; Palo Alto—Roos Brothers and at Wideman's; Stanford Campus—at Board of Athletic Control Accounting Office.

U. S. Retains Polo International Cup

(By Universal Service)
MEADOWBROOK, N. Y., Sept. 14.—America's "big four" retained the International polo cup today when they won the second straight contest from the challenging army in India team. The Americans won eight goals to five.
The new English combination fought harder than the team that represented England on Saturday, but the riding of Tommy Hitchcock and his team mates proved too much for the challengers.

LAZZERI DINNER SKETCHES—

By Edson

MORE THAN FIVE HUNDRED people prominent in the sporting world were present Thursday night at the testimonial dinner tendered to Tony Lazzeri, Yankee second baseman, at the Hotel Commodore in New York. It was a wonderful tribute to the young Italian who in less than two years has risen to a position of stardom in the national game.

Heeney-Paulino Verdict Hit

YE FIGHT FAN exercised his voice in no uncertain fashion at the Garden in New York when judges and referee voted return contest between Paulino Uzdun and Tom Heeney a draw. Questionable decision gave Umi victory in their first meeting, but the howls of disapproval then were mild in comparison to the demonstration following announcement of latest verdict. While the bout was savage on record, not one knockdown was registered. Paulino slipped in the closing round, as depicted above.

Leo Flynn Bemoans Society Climbing Of "Mr." Tunney

By GENE FOWLER
(Universal Service Staff Correspondent)
CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—Leo P. Flynn, manager of Jack Dempsey, today made the grave charge that Gene Tunney is a social climber. Flynn is so mad at the Tunney set, which is now gracing the Cedar Chest colony at Lake Villa, Ill., that he has ordered his men to go on a fork strike. A fork strike is one in which athletes revert to type and eat only with the knife. In society, this is regarded as the unkindest cut of all.
Flynn declares that the Tunney people—whom he calls "snobs" and "fortune hunters"—instigated certain rumors to the effect that Dempsey and Flynn are on the outs. In reply, Flynn flings the promised slap by Max "Boo-Boo" Hoff against Tunney, right in the face of his alleged tormentors to show that they needn't take on airs. Hoff is a member of the celebrated Philadelphia Huff-Hoffs, who, if not exactly in the social register at least have been in the cash register, and we don't mean no-sales, either.
Hoff is a fight manager and political student. He has charged that he paid over $20,000 to Tunney and the latter's manager, William Vanderbilt Gibson, before the first Tunney-Dempsey scrap. In return, Hoff was to get twenty per cent of Tunney's cut, and now he wants to attach Tunney's million-dollar share of the current battle at Soldier Field, September 22. Flynn was in a huff when he discussed this angle—indeed he was in a Boo-Boo Huff-Hoff.

"Don't fall for that holier than thou attitude of the Tunney boys. You can bet your life Hoff is after them and so are a lot of others. Why, they will have more suits against Tunney than there are in all New York's garment trade zone."
"Tunney and Gibson—The men who are trying to worry Dempsey and me with false rumors of disension in our happy camp—admitted that they signed a contract with Hoff. They admit that there was a transaction involving $20,000. Now, what was that twenty grand for? Ask those society birds that question."
"Their comeback is that they were flat in funds—a condition that so often besets noblemen in this country. And they add they merely took this money to tide them over. Well, why didn't they get it from Rickard, Tex usually is good for a touch. He is the biggest hearted fellow in the game when fighters need money. They could have got $50,000 from him if they had needed it. They didn't have to take it from Hoff or any other outsider. Particularly as they knew they had at least $200,000 coming to them for their end of the Dempsey fight."
Mr. Flynn gestured wildly and laid down the law with his gaunt forefinger. Without asking that he be pardoned for pointing, he sized on with this:
"Now, what was it that Hoff

GATE RECEIPTS OF BIG BOUT PASS 2 MILLION

(By Universal Service)
CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 14.—The battle of the three centuries is a week away from the gong, and a century away from fulfillment.
George Tex Rickard, the promoter; virtually admitted today that there is an annoying detail of $1,000,000 to be disposed of before his gate reaches the three century mark. He will announce through the medium of large advertising space in all Chicago newspapers Thursday that plenty of good tickets are still available.
The suspicion is gaining ground that Rickard may have been over-stating his case when he announced last Friday that the sale had reached the $2,000,000 mark.
There is no doubt that there has been a tremendous sale of the $40 and $30 seats, but there are healthy blocks of these tickets still available.
So far, the public has shown little interest in the sections priced from $25 to $5. Here is Rickard's own estimate of the tickets which remain to be sold, and practically all of them are still on his hands:
16,000 at $25, totalling $400,000.
15,000 at $20, totalling $300,000.
15,000 at $15, totalling $225,000.
30,000 at $10, totalling $300,000.
225,000 at $5, totalling $1,125,000.
The grand total for the five sections reaches the sum of $1,250,000, which is more than the entire gate of any previous heavyweight championship fight excepting only the Carpenter-Dempsey and Tunney-Dempsey affairs.

WRIGHT TWIRLS FOR ST. LOUIS

"Jigs" Wright, former twirler for the Richmond Fireman and of the Oakland and Kansas City Americans, pitched three innings for the St. Louis Browns yesterday in their game with Boston Red Sox.
Wright walked one and allowed three hits with the Red Sox scoring two runs. But the St. Louis team lost the game 9 to 6. Boston got 9 hits off Stewart in 3 1-3 innings and 3 off Crowder in 12 1-3 innings. Wright has been with the St. Louis Browns about two months, being sent from the local foreman by Louis Butler, of the Standard Oil Barrel House team, a scout for the Browns.

Gloves Arrive For Dempsey-Tunney Go

(By Universal Service)
CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—The gloves for the Tunney-Dempsey battle arrived at the offices of the Illinois State Athletic commission today. They were made by Sol Levinson, famous knuckle-padder of San Francisco, and the man who has made mittens for countless title battles, including Rickard's first big fight, the Gans-Nelson fray. There are 2 complete sets of gloves, which weigh six ounces each. Last year, Levinson had only the Dempsey measurements and consequently made the Philadelphia weapons according to that model. Tunney has a smaller hand than Jack, and has claimed his gloves shifted, became soggy and robbed him of much punching ability in the Philadelphia bout. Consequently, Levinson got measurements of both men this time and manufactured accordingly.

Kid Blithington, sir, and was forced to give him a fortnight's notice. Anything else, sir?"

Ed Sullivan's SPORT WHIRL

LAZZERI SAILS ON, AND ON, AND ON
"I am proud to be an Italian-American."
Tony Lazzeri, honored by American baseball fans and Italians of New York city, told the whole story of the Italian race in that sentence at the dinner given at the Hotel Commodore.
Of all races, the Italian seems to have the keenest pride in country.
Their athletes, their jurists and their business men in this country seem to be spurred ahead by an intense ambition to reflect greater glory upon the Old Country. Each signal exploit performed here is their tribute to the land of their fathers.
Lazzeri, born in San Francisco, has a deep affection for America but deep in his mind he carries a wistful vision of peaceful Genoa, where the blue waters of the gulf reach up to cool the shore line. It was Genoa that another proud Italian youngster dreamed the dream that was to affect the entire world. He was Christopher Columbus, the great Genoese navigator. The Lazzeris are from Genoa.
Go through the list of Italian sport stars and you will find each imbued with that same fierce pride of race. Johnny Dundee, greatest of Italian ring men, has it. So has Joe Dundee, the Baltimore hoarder of the welterweight title; Georgetti, the bike sensation, and Johnny Wilson, former middleweight champion of the world. And Dorando, of whom they fashioned a song.
You see this same fine spirit at work among those Italians who witness from the sidelines the feats of their more gifted countrymen. They turn out en masse to cheer when any Italian fighter is on a card; they throng the Yankee Stadium and other American League park to shower their idolatry upon Tony Lazzeri; they jam the six-day bike races to root home the tiny Georgetti.
Their business men and jurists are never too busy to heed the plea of an Italian family in distress.
It is an old race, rich in traditions, rich in national heroes and deeds of heroism. From the heel of the boot to the Northern tip, it is laced together by loyalty and pride of country.
Lazzeri, embarrassed by the honors piled on him at the Hotel Commodore dinner, forgot probably the exact speech he had prepared. But it required no effort, no thought, for him to sound the sentiment that is rooted deeply in the heart of every Italian:—"I am proud to be an Italian-American."

TUNING FURK OF YANK INFIELD
There is a definite shyness about Tony Lazzeri away from the big league diamond, but he is not hesitant or reserved with the bases loaded and a hit needed to score winning runs.
And there is no timidity evident when Heinemann clips a terrific liner that bites dirt in Tony's territory. When he is playing deep or up on the grass, Lazzeri can always glove hot shots. He plays to either side with equal skill and Huggins has shifted him all over the infield without finding a flaw in the kid's sensational defensive work. Lazzeri, apparently handicapped by the slender wrists and sensitive fingers of a violinist, has overcome physical disadvantages by sheer baseball artistry.
He was bred to the royal purple of the big leagues and neither wrists, nor fingers, nor slight physique can check this baseball messenger on his appointed rounds.
Only a youngster in years, he has what Jim Kahn calls "a gray baseball head."
It is Lazzeri who relays off all Huggins' signals to the infield. Joe Dugan, wise in the ways of big league strategy, plays on his right, but Huggins sends his signals and an occasional S O S through the Lazzeri receiving station.
EVEN HUGGINS POOSHES HIM UP
Since the first afternoon this likeable Italian had appeared at the Yankee Stadium the fans accepted him as one of their own.
Casting about for a nickname in which to vehicle their affection, the fans and baseball writers hit upon "Posh 'Em Up, Tony," and to the end of his playing days, Lazzeri will answer to that mellow title.
"Posh 'Em Up, Tony," they plead when he comes to bat in a tight spot, and Tony, he pooshes 'em up, slanting the ball over the infielder's heads, occasionally clearing the home run barrier, but always pooshing 'em up where it does most good.
Miller Huggins, not overrich in emotion and not given to sentiment, has completely succumbed to Tony's personal charm and brilliant mechanical play.
Huggins, who discovered Bob Meusel, has always had a personal interest in the Coast outfielder. But there is no player who has the same place in Huggins' esteem and cordial feeling as Tony.
Tony scooped up a blazing drive in Detroit on the last Western trip of Col. Ruppert's raiders.
Huggins, chary with praise, actually became excited:—"The greatest stop ever made in any league," swore the half-pint Houdini of the American circuit.
When you get that much from Huggins you have to be an unusual player and an unusual personality, for Huggins is as cold as a black Alaskan dawn.
Through all the high honors Tony remains shy, likable and given to one short utterance:—"I am proud to be an Italian-American."
That is his creed and he lives up to all the way.

"KIDNAP PLOT" CHARGE MADE, GIRL VANISHES

Heed, 50, San Francisco engineer and inventor, on a statutory charge, gave promise of being pursued in the court of Superior Judge H. V. Alvarado with the prosecution depending upon a statement made by the missing witness, Miss Esther Leighton, 21-year-old Oakland newspaper solicitor.

Revealing that Miss Leighton had disclosed to him that she had been harassed innumerable times by strangers, who came to her home, encountered her on the streets and in restaurants, He declared that the only conclusion that he could form was that the girl had been "kidnaped."

"Several times since Leighton's arrest on July 28, Miss Leighton complained to me and to Deputy Sheriff J. W. Smiley that she had been harassed and shadowed and had been offered large sums of money to leave the state."

When Miss Leighton failed to appear here this morning for the scheduled opening of the trial, Smiley was assigned to search for her but reported that he could not find any trace of her.

"Miss Leighton, despite the efforts at intimidation of her was determined upon testifying," Hoy declared. "She worked Monday and as late as Monday night she told friends that she would testify 'if it is the last act of my life.' She did not know the identity of the persons who attempted to dissuade her from prosecution, sometimes by threats."

Lougheed, prominent as an engineer and known as an inventor, was released on bail of $5,000 a few days after his arrest.

Miss Leighton charged to authorities that she encountered Lougheed in Berkeley, and that Lougheed persuaded her to accompany him in his automobile on the representation that he would aid her in securing subscriptions. Lougheed, she claimed, drove to the Contra Costa hills and there attacked her.

Hoy claims to hold a confession by Lougheed admitting advances toward the girl but in which he denies having criminally assaulted her. Miss Leighton claimed that after the alleged attack she made her way about to Berkeley and resorted at the Berkeley police station.

Lougheed is represented by Attorneys Morgan J. Doyle and J. Cullinan of San Francisco. Cullinan declared that the defense has no knowledge of the girl's whereabouts.

"We are just as anxious for her to appear as a witness as is the prosecution," he declared.

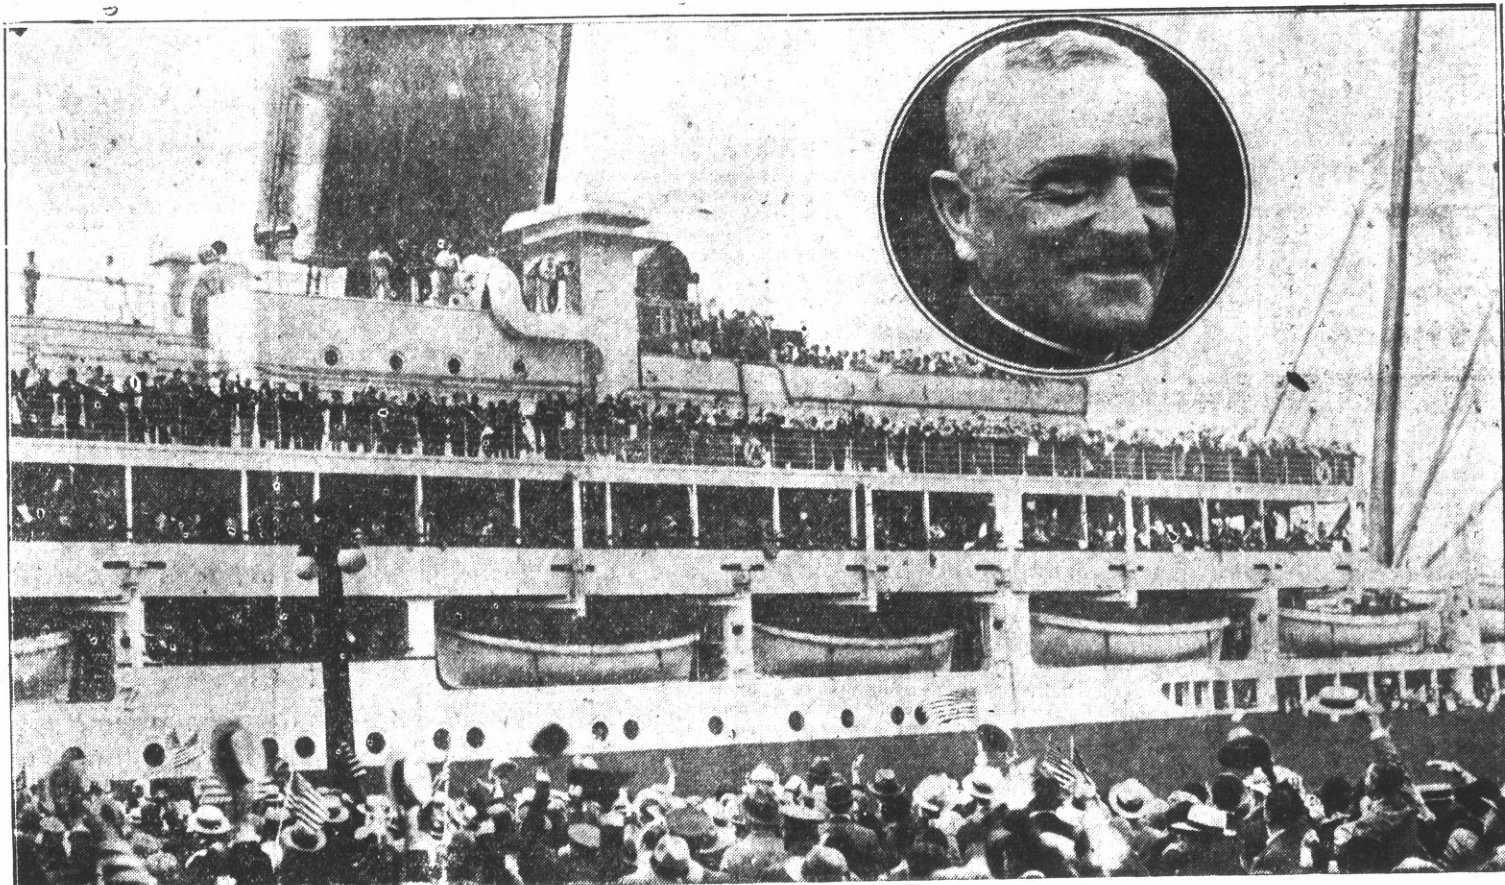

Affidavits of Hoy and Smiley were presented to the court at noon.

Virtually of the same tenor the affidavits declare that the girl talked to the two officials on several occasions informing them that she had been "continually harassed and threatened" by people she did not know; that she was offered money to leave the state and not testify against Lougheed; that she was threatened that if she did testify her mother, who is an invalid, would be told of her connection with the case and "they would thereby attempt to blacken her character."

These people suggested, the affidavits state, that if the girl's mother was informed it might cause her death. Little more than ten minutes was required for Judge Alvarado to obtain the jury. The defense excluded the prosecution did not challenge a single witness.

The jury is composed of William

Helms Opposes Grid Publicity

Superintendent of Schools, W. T. Helms in a report to the directors of the Richmond chamber of commerce on a communication suggesting that football athletics of the Richmond Union high school be used as publicity as a means of advertising the city decided adversely on such means of publicity.

"I feel that the matter of football is overdone among many of the high schools and the contests of the leagues, which are sometimes carried on until after Christmas keep the school in a disturbed state throughout the whole term. The Richmond high school is not in the league, and plays whatever teams it pleases. We try not to have the athletics overdone in the Richmond schools," said Helms.

Persia Has New Hat In Honor Of Shah

(By Universal Service)

TEHERAN, Sept. 14.—The average Persian thinks more of what he puts on his head than what he has inside it, remarks a Teheran newspaper in tracing the reduction in the size of the Persian hat during the past twenty years. The rage in men's hats at present is the "Pahlavi" named in honor of the Shah. It is a low black hat with a peaked front, the peak symbolizing the military rule which now controls the destiny of Iran.

The tall headgear of earlier days was scrapped when Persia celebrated the advent of its limited political freedom.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—The night was hot and sultry.

Miss Jean Siegler, 26 year old nurse, also was hot. She went to a beach. She doffed her clothes and left them on the beach while she went for a swim.

When she returned her clothes were gone. A watchman told her to call the police station. She did and entered into the following conversation:

"Have you my clothes?"

"We have some here we found on the beach."

"Well, bring them to me."

"Oh, no, you will have to come and identify them."

"But I can't, I'm not dressed."

"You mean to say you have on no bathing suit?"

"A bathing suit yes, and a slicker too, but I can't go out on the street that way."

"Well, you'll have to come down to the station and identify them, anyway, if you have got on a bathing suit at least, you've got on more clothes than you will have when you get into what we have here."

Miss Siegler went after her clothes.

FANNY BRICE WINS DECREE FROM "NICKY"

By FRED VAN DEVENDER
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—Fanny Brice got her divorce today. She was married to Jules Nicky Arnstein, gambler, confidence man, felon.

No alimony was asked. Fanny thinks she can get along without Nicky's support and Nicky is too much of a gentleman to ask for it.

Fanny gets the custody of the two little children born to the union.

It was all very simple. Fanny filed her suit on Monday through her attorney, B. Ehrlick. She believes in getting quick action, so she appeared in Judge Otto Kern's court today and told her side of the story.

Nicky was not present. He has departed for the Pacific Coast, was rumored, preferring not to embarrass his wife by combating her suit for freedom.

"He had an inferior complex," Fanny told the Justice. "And he no longer 'my man' but 'their man.' That meant of course, that other women were claiming him and that he was no longer hers exclusively, which Fanny does demand. And, unfaithfulness is grounds for divorce in the commonwealth of Illinois."

Fanny was asked about the time when she found Nicky and another woman in a hotel.

"When we arrived," she said, "I found him in a room with another woman. She was in a combination . . ."

"You mean a step-in," prompted her attorney.

"And there were bottles all around," she continued. "Neither of us said a word."

She said she had nothing to do with Nicky getting into that predicament, when questioned by Judge Kern. He evidently was of the opinion that there might have been collusion.

Otto Baer, attorney for Nicky, explained that his client still loves Fanny, loves her too much to oppose her petition.

"He will return to Chicago as soon as all this affair is settled," Baer explained.
